

Dear FCC: Please support New Jersey's "don't call" law. Since its implementation, the number of annoying, rude and unsolicited phone calls we used to receive at home have greatly decreased. This is especially beneficial in my household because I am caring for my 84-year-old father. On too many occasions he would struggle to get up and answer the phone, only to discover that it was a solicitation for some product we don't need or, worse yet, he would answer the phone and have the caller click off before a conversation could take place. Because we have Caller ID, we could tell that such calls were from solicitors. While we hope that people obtain jobs, there has to be some balance between jobs and people's privacy. Dozens of unwanted phone solicitations per day are invasions of one's privacy. New Jersey's law is needed and must remain in place as is. Thank you, Valorie Caffee
